INTEGRAL-ART

Sound Research
Art Finding

sound, music, landscape, architecture, form, sculpture, light, color in integral interaction of the arts and advanced composition specially developed for acoustics, media, landscape, and architectural conditions creates new forms of contemporary art and how to deal with it combines art and everyday life, understands technology as a cultural instrument involving research and science is a vision, logic of ideas, reflection, and realization of an advanced, ideology-free art gives the senses integral connections of experience – as balanced interaction of different parts of a whole takes place in accordance with rules and coincidence

integrates relations of the timeless and the contemporary, of truth and beauty, of the universal – the individual – the social

The 7 domains of the Integral Art concept:

- I MUSIC IN SPACE
- II ACOUSTICS OPTICS CONCRETE
- III TIME-SOUND / SOUND-TIME IN LANDSCAPE AND ARCHITECTURE
- IV RHYTHMS – RITES – DANCE
- V PURE MUSIC – MUSIC AS SPACE
- VI ALEA MUSIC
- VII COSMOS OF THE GAME

*„Spirit thrown against the storm,

(Stéphane Mallarmé)

„The spirit precedes reality“

(H.Johannes Wallmann)

Only a few annual festivals in Germany are dedicated to the Gesamtkunstwerk of a single composer. One of the „youngest“ festivals (which began about 150 years ago) is the Bayreuth Festival with Richard Wagner's national mythical opera worlds. Wagner already took personal care that his work would not disappear into the black hole of time. Especially since it is hardly a coincidence that Hitler was a fervent adherent of Wagner, Wagner's oeuvre – without denying its high musical quality – does not meet the cultural requirements of modern democracy, nor the necessary spiritual understanding between different cultures.

The Gesamtkunstwerk INTEGRAL-ART by the Berlin composer H. Johannes Wallmann stands as an enlightened modern counterpart to Richard Wagner's Gesamtkunstwerk. With its unusual beauty of sound, high compositional quality, acoustically large-scale architectural and landscape references, anti-totalitarian world spirit, and European dimensions, it offers a large-format, modern alternative to Wagner.

Whether on the steep coast of Helgoland, in the chamber music hall of the Berlin Philharmonic, in the cityscape or on the suspension railway of Wuppertal, whether in the Berlin Cathedral, in the UNESCO World Heritage Site, the Kingdom of Dessau-Wörlitz, or in the cityscape of Dresden – with his advanced spatial and landscape sound compositions, H. Johannes Wallmann has repeatedly drawn thousands of listeners into the spell of new sounds. His Gesamtkunstwerke were visited beyond insider circles by tens of thousands of listeners and broadcast live by radio stations. He succeeded in extending a great artistic arc, ranging from the most subtle chamber music to a large-scale landscape sound composition. His work stands for art as an energy of freedom and intelligence, for truthfulness and new beauty, for responsible participation, and for humility toward the great organic self-organization system called life.

In addition to the high artistic quality, the excellent reviews, and the numerous radio and live broadcasts, the philosophical and intellectual implications of Wallmann's works (as well as his commitment as a critic of communist East Germany's system and as a citizen's rights activist – see also pages 64/104) are an immense challenge not to allow this completely new Gesamtkunstwerk to disappear into the black hole of time.

Especially since Wallmann's Integral Art projects have numerous unique selling points and, after the fall of communism, were able to be realized as precedents thanks to prominent sponsorships (e.g. the cultural program of the European Union, the Federal Cultural Foundation, the Berlin Capital Cultural Fund, and patronages from two Federal Chancellors and three Prime Ministers), we are now striving to establish the INTEGRAL-ART FESTSPIELE, which would stage annual performances of these works. The present catalogue is therefore primarily a project plan and vision and by no means merely a documentation of the Integral Art projects realized over decades.

Since Wallmann's Gesamtkunstwerke are originally concerned with the idea of cultural renewal and the integral interaction of the arts, the INTEGRAL-ART FESTSPIELE will also provide a broad forum for artists, scientists, and philosophers who are spiritually related or think differently. This forum, also beyond the INTEGRAL-ART FESTSPIELE, is to become one of the initiators of European cultural debates.

Thus, the INTEGRAL-ART FESTSPIELE open up a new possibility to open the door for a [European] culture that thinks big and in the tradition of modernity and the Enlightenment and to anchor an anti-totalitarian social consensus. In view of the anthropocene epoch and new nationalistic and totalitarian mentalities, some of which come from the „middle“ of societies, there is likely to be a direct democratic general interest in this.

Why should this project (whose estimated annual budget is in the lower tens of millions) fail because of the „necessity of material“? And in the sense of the democratic community, why should this Gesamtkunstwerk not receive support comparable to, for example, Richard Wagner's Gesamtkunstwerk, which can be heard and seen every year in Bayreuth, as well as on many other stages of the Federal Republic of Germany and Europe?

*„because art is a daughter of freedom,
and from the necessity of spirits,
not from the necessity of matter
she wants to receive her regulation.“*

(Friedrich Schiller)

"That's what makes a masterpiece."

„How big can we think?“
(R. Buckminster Fuller)

The main ideas of the ten cycles of the INTEGRAL-ART FESTSPIELE on the basis of the 7 domains of INTEGRAL-ART (see page 2) take on their concrete form. Truth and beauty, the emotional and the rational, enter into interesting and touching connections with the musical and acoustic structures.

The duration of the INTEGRAL-ART FESTSPIELE corresponds approximately to that of the Bayreuth Festival. It is assumed that, in one year, visitors will generally visit two of the ten festival cycles in Berlin & ... Of course, depending on the circumstances, other visiting options are also possible.

Since Wallmann's INTEGRAL-ART concept is associated with a wide variety of implementation possibilities, it would be conceivable for places in Germany and Europe to apply to organize the INTEGRAL-ART FESTSPIELE. Assuming certain architectural, urban, and landscape qualities, the program design would then be modified accordingly, while retaining the artistic and conceptual premises.

R. Buckminster Fuller wrote in the 1960s: „How big can we think?“ This question arises anew at the beginning of the 3rd millennium and now reads: How big and integral MUST we think in the face of the Anthropocene Epoch so that humanity is not too stupid to survive in the long run?
